REPUBLICAN NATIONAL TICKET.

FOR PRESIDENT,

BENJAMIN HARRISON,
of Indiana.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

LEVI P. MORTON, of New York.

General Harrison is still busily engaged in receiving callers. The democrats have declared that he was a man of unsocial manners, and unapproachable, but his popularity it seems, has not suffered in consequence of their statements.

The price of sugar is still advancing. The profits of the trust for the ensuing year at the present prices are estimated at $30,000,000. Every consumer must feel the evidences of this powerful monopoly.

Governor Adams has been requested by the Denver chamber of commerce to issue a call for a deep water convention to be held at Denver, August 28. Representation will be invited from every state west of the Mississippi river. Colorado Springs should send a full delegation.

The Brotherhood of Engineers is unwilling to confine itself beaten in its fight with the Burlington, and has decided to continue the strike. This means that a large number of men will be kept in a state of idleness which can result in no possible good to the members of the organization to which they belong.

The republican senators have thrown an evident opposition to consider the tariff question in a far more liberal light than their colleagues in the house. They recognize the fact that the republican party stands committed to honest reading of the tariff. A bill can be framed which will not injure any section of the country or the interests of any member.

Mayor Hewitt of New York is one of the most conservative men in politics. In speaking of whom he should appoint on the new aqueduct commission he said: "I shall appoint four of the most independent men I can find—men who will cultivate me every time I am wrong." In those days of high partisan prejudice such language is quite refreshing.

The democrats and greenbackers have nominated a fusion ticket in Michigan. Their candidate for governor is a protectionist and a silk manufacturer. He declares that he stands by President Cleveland's message but does not approve of the Mills bill. He even voted against the clause embarrassing the bill in the committee of St. Louis. There is hardly one principle on which the two parties agree, except that they want to divide the offices.

The Philadelphia Press finds fault with the decision of the United States circuit court in New York city, declaring that the action of the church of the Holy Trinity, of that city, in sending to England for a rector is a violation of the labor contract law. It says:

As it stands, the church is under judgment to pay a fine of $1000. This sum is a small matter to a church so wealthy as the defendant in this proceeding, but it will be doing a public service if it resists payment to the end and appeals the case to the United States supreme court. Judge Wallace is an able jurist, but he is not infallible, and the construction he has placed upon the labor contract law is so opposed to the expressed intent of its framers, and renders the law so palpably ridiculous that it is not easy to believe that the supreme court will not sent it as the right interpretation of the act. The language of the bill, prohibiting "all contracts to perform labor or service by any persons previous to their migration or importation to this country," is so general and all-embracing that it is held to preclude a church from sending to Europe and engaging there a leader. But for a proviso inserted at the last moment, by which "actors, artists, lecturers and singers" are excluded from the operation of the law, Patti's engagement in this country would have been cut off prematurely and Henry Irving's company would have been unable to make dates for their appearance in the United States. If any one had conceived that clergymen might possibly be excluded by the bill there is no doubt that it would have been promptly amended so as to have ministers exempted from its operation. It should have been confined to manual laborers pure and simple, and since, because of the clumsiness with which it was drawn, it has become an annoyance and the target of just ridicule, congress ought to amend it at once so as to confine it to its original and legitimate purpose.

DOING A GOOD WORK.

The Only Washington Home in the United States.

CHICAGO, July 14.—There is no more interesting place in this city that I know anything about than the Washingtonian home, Chicago's Washingtonian home is, I believe, the only one in the United States.

At our latest advent departure was taken into the state of a worthy woman the inmates may be employed at manual labor has been added, and it is one of the best features. It will be full of ornamental and fruit trees and the grounds around it will be laid out in walks and flower beds. Here the reformed man sits at his desk as the clerk of the institution, superintended by a lucky manager, who knows by experience the wiles and tricks of his former companions.

Not less interesting than the home itself are the methods adopted for the reformation of the inebriate. The man who United Bells Law, an editor. Fitting up a little room in the rear of his office with two beds and a strong lock on the door, he rescued from that humble hospital, too drink victims of the worst instance. He kept them there thirty days, and when he thought they had reformed he asked them to take the pledge and if found he asked them to take the pledge and kept them in their office. They signed the [illegible] of the man took some [illegible] and, [illegible] and [illegible] sobered [illegible] time ever by [illegible] and [illegible] with his pledge of the [illegible] to [illegible] that they [illegible] the pledge had not passed a saloon with a dime in his pocket without stopping in for liquor. He never let [illegible] but lived up to it. He never let [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

"You can fool some of the people all the time, you can fool all of the people some of the time, but you can not fool all the people all the time."

Merchants who publish silly advertisements ponder on this profitably.

Is it better to deal with Clothiers who sell anything and show very little, or to patronize a house that professes only what it can perform?

We have a great stock of things that men and boys wear. Our Clothing is carefully selected and well made. Choose your apparel HERE, because we can fit you, please you and after you once learn the merits of our goods we believe you will continue to use them.
